Lysosomal Oxidase GALK1/Galactokinase Is Required for X-Gal Stain--Positive Neurons in Mouse Visual Cortex. The X-gal stain is widely used to trace neuronal cells in culture and in intact tissue. Although the X-gal stain is a histochemical marker for beta-galactosidase activity, X-gal-positive neurons in the visual cortex of knockout mice fail to respond to a visual stimulus, indicating that these neurons are generated by a mutant gene (Galk1) encoding lysosomal galactokinase. This study provides a direct proof for X-gal-positive neuron induction in vivo and identifies Galk1 as a key factor for the neuronal response to optic nerve stimulation.Q: How to make a singleton class in JavaScript I'm trying to understand the correct way to write a singleton in JavaScript. var Singleton = function() { var _instance = new Object(); return _instance; } When I try to access a variable within the object, I get this error: "Uncaught TypeError: Cannot read property 'SomeOtherProperty' of undefined" Any ideas what I'm doing wrong here? A: You need to move the constructor inside the scope: function Singleton() { var _instance = new Object(); return _instance; } In a browser, any code outside of a function doesn't execute by default, so the first line is only reached as long as the function is attached to an event loop, which for a string literal (your assignment) is not. You can use the following instead, to ensure that you create a Singleton only once: var Singleton = function() { if (typeof Singleton === 'undefined') { Singleton = new Object(); } return Singleton; }(); A more proper singleton pattern is explained here.
