I met Tim in the 1970s in Ireland. He told me the story, as he had heard it, of what happened to the ashes of the Holy City when it was burnt to ashes. You have likely read the story. It is disputed. In 721 CE, in the Umayyad Caliphate, the Arabs conquered Palestine. A few years later, an emir in Damascus, Caliph Sulayman ibn Abd al-Malik, thought the city be burnt, and the ashes scattered. Which probably wasn't, of course, a very good idea to win the hearts of Palestine's Arab settlers. There are stories that say the ashes took root, others that the Arabs were merciful and sprinkled the ashes on an olive tree. Others say that the remains of the City are now a rocky hill and place of pilgrimage called el--Buras. If, as I am told, many of the stories are true, or variations of
